What is Breast Cancer? And why Mammograms are important

Breast cancer arises from the uncontrolled growth of breast cells. Early detection is key to effective treatment, which is where mammograms come into play. These specialised X-ray exams can spot cancerous changes in the breast tissue before any symptoms appear, making them an essential tool in the fight against breast cancer.

How often should I go for Breast Cancer Screenings?

According to the Singapore Health Promotion Board, it is recommended for women who are 50 years old and above to go for a mammogram once every two years. Women 40 to 49, can screen for breast cancer, annually, provided their doctor has discussed the benefits and limitations with them. It is important to make an informed choice about going for screening.
